

Brenda Everton Interview

Now for another treat, let's meet Brenda Everton of BODY CHEMISTRY. Here's her interview with Donna Byrd of Lifestyle Magazine.

DB: Hi Brenda, thanks for joining us today. You recently remarried your ex-husband, Dominic Ayers. Is the second time around better than the first?

BE: Definitely.

DB: Why?

BE: Because we're more mature and our love is definitely deeper.

DB: So who does the cooking at home?

BE: Our schedules are so busy, we decided to keep Dominic's wonderful housekeeper and she does most of the cooking, but on special occasions I'll bake something.

DB: Your last book with your husband was a bestseller, do you plan on working on another one?

BE: We already have begun our next project,. After the birth of our son we thought it would be fun to work on a science book for children.

DB: Congratulations. How do you find the time to balance work and family?

BE: I prioritize. My family comes first and my work second and Dominic does the same. We learned from past experience that the other way doesn't work for us.

DB: You grew up with seven brothers and now you have a son. What's the advantage of being surrounded by the male of the species?

BE: (Laughs) The best advantage is that men are not a mystery to me.

DB: I know that your son has a rather unusual middle name.

BE: Yes, it's Cartwright.

DB: Why? Is there a story behind that?

BE: Yes, Dominic and I wanted to honor a dear friend of ours...
